

Call for Reports

Studies in Oral History, No. 44, 2022

Special Issue – Migrant voices: Community collaboration and telling migration histories

Submissions are invited from Australia and overseas for the reports section of the 2022 issue of Studies in Oral History, the journal of Oral History Australia.

Reports may describe oral history projects conducted by academic researchers, museum curators, heritage professionals, consulting historians, community historians and more. Projects may have resulted in public outcomes such as websites, exhibitions, podcasts, theses, articles or books. Please note the reports section is not peer-reviewed; notes from the field, updates on exciting new work, or reflections on the process and/or outcomes of oral history projects are encouraged. Reports which relate to the special issue theme of 'Migrant voices: Community collaboration and telling migration histories' are particularly welcome but not mandatory.

Please note that while the reports are not peer-reviewed, we cannot accept all reports for publication and accepted reports will need to be edited for length, clarity and adherence to the Style Guide. Reports will be selected on the basis of quality of writing, the diversity of oral history perspectives showcased across the reports section and relevance to the special issue theme. Please consult the Guidelines for Contributors and Journal Style Guide for further information.

Word limit: 1,500 words.

Deadline for report submissions: 29 April 2022.

Send submissions to: Joint Editors of Studies in Oral History Dr Skye Krichauff and Dr Carla Pascoe Leahy by sending an email with your report to: journal@oralhistoryaustralia.org.au.